

Sprint #3 - Schedule

This sprint, we decided to focus on two main features: the quest to be verified page and the user profile, with the former being split into two pages. This explains the 3 critical paths shown in the middle of the diagram. We noticed that in order to complete the front-end of each page (in particular for the quest to be verified section), the backend routes needed to be created in order to pull elements from our database. Fortunately, we were able to finish all routes pertaining to quest verification, leading to the completion of the critical paths this sprint. On the outside, you can see minor tickets that are unassociated with the tickets residing within the critical paths. Since we focused on the critical path, we were not able to complete any of the outside paths. Overall, we felt that in terms of ticket organisation and workflow, there were less struggles caused by blockers. The lack of blockers signifies that we've improved in organising which tickets to complete first, helping us reach the end by completing all tickets within the critical paths.
